CURRENT COMMENT.

The further the evidence proceeds in the Strathcona Mine tragedy as it is brought out before the Coal Commission inquiry, with which it has little to do, under which it is made a subsidiary consideration and which it was dragged by the heels when it should have been the subject of a full departmental investigation on its own merits, the more apparent it becomes that the views expressed by the Chronicle are those which meet with the general approval of the public and which the department will undoubtedly take steps to meet. It may be that the coroner's jury will not be so severe in their censure, but if it were, it may be excused in the light of subsequent events and probable results. In his evidence before the Commission, Inspector Fraser made some astonishing admissions to Judge Sifton, among them the following:—

"How could the accident at the Strathcona mine have been averted?" asked Judge Sifton.

"IN THIS CASE," said Mr. Fraser, "I THINK THERE SHOULD HAVE BEEN A WATCHMAN EMPLOYED ABOVE GROUND. THE MEN, TOO, SHOULD NOT HAVE BEEN ALLOWED TO EAT THEIR LUNCH IN THE ENGINE ROOM. 'Would it not have been advisable to have the air shaft further from the main shaft?' asked the chief justice."

"THAT WOULD HELP SOME," was the reply, "BUT EVEN THEN THERE IS NOTHING IN THE LAW TO PREVENT USING THE AIR SHAFT AS A HOISTING SHAFT." Mr. Fraser agreed that it would be better to have the law changed so that the air shaft should be 100 feet from the main shaft. In reply to some questions of the commission, Mr. Fraser said the law had been complied with in the Strathcona mine. IT WAS TRUE THAT THERE WAS ONE SECTION THAT SAID THAT THE AIR SHAFT SHOULD BE FORTY-FIVE FEET FROM THE MAIN SHAFT, BUT THERE WAS ANOTHER SECTION THAT COVERED THIS POINT.

"DON'T YOU THINK IT WOULD BE A GOOD IDEA TO DO AWAY WITH THESE EXCEPTIONS?" asked Judge Sifton.

"We can not do away with all the exceptions as some of them are necessary," was the reply.

On Monday, June 10th, the Chronicle said: "THE MANAGEMENT OF THE MINE IS OPEN TO SOME CRITICISM FOR NOT HAVING SOME RESPONSIBLE PERSON AT THE TOP IN THE CAPACITY OF WATCHMAN, AND AGENT THAT THE AIR SHAFT BE PLACED OUTSIDE THE RANGE OF THE BURNING HEAT FROM THE MAIN SHAFT. THE MEN'S LIVES MIGHT HAVE BEEN SAVED."

The jury said: "WE CENSURE THE STRATHCONA COAL COMPANY FOR NOT SINKING ANOTHER SHAFT IN COMPLIANCE WITH CLAUSE B, CHAP. 25. WE ALSO CENSURE THE PROVINCIAL INSPECTOR IN THIS CASE FOR NOT HAVING INSISTED ON THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE ABOVE-SAID SHAFT. WE ALSO SUGGEST AND RECOMMEND TO THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT OF ALBERTA THAT IN ALL MINES WHERE ANY NUMBER OF MEN ARE EMPLOYED UNDER GROUND AN OUTSIDE WATCHMAN SHALL BE EMPLOYED."

In the face of the admissions made by the inspector to Judge Sifton taking into consideration the fact that the jurors had viewed the remains of the unfortunate victims a few hours before, that gross neglect existed somewhere, and that the evidence pointed to the management, the inspector and the council, is it any wonder that they brought in the verdict they did? The word censure is perhaps somewhat harsh but the jury, composed as it was, of hard-headed business men, was more concerned about the idea than the idiom and if they erred in that they used too strong a term, they erred on the right side and the evidence before the commission has proved beyond peradventure that their belief that neglect existed was not groundless.

In another column will be found a request from the committee of the Sons of England having to do with the matter of a memorial to the miners who lost their lives in the accident of June 8th, asking the Chronicle to open a subscription list for the purpose.

It is the intention to have the memorial take the form of a drinking fountain to be erected in some public place where the thirst of man and beast may be quenched. The object is a laudable one and the action of the committee admirable and the city council might see its way to supplement the fund raised by the public for the purpose. A fountain is already a necessity and there could be no valid objection to the city expending a reasonable amount on the undertaking. The Chronicle will gladly receive and acknowledge subscriptions for the object in view.

That the tightness of money is not confined to the west is shown by the fact that the Hamilton city debentures are for less than par and the money needed for sewer work will be provided by the Bank of Hamilton at 5 1/2 per cent.

The city has decided to cut out the isolation hospital and east end fire station for this year.

There is a tendency to assign the history of financiers to purchase debentures of western municipalities to the fact that they are anxious to proceed more rapidly than their securities will warrant. It would seem that this assumption is not well founded and that the tightening of purse strings is indulged in irrespective of locality.

The Herald thus comments on the situation:

"There is no denying that the city is up against a tough financial problem. The best offer that has been made for the $122,000 issue of four per cent. debentures which the city is trying to sell is 91—and even that offer is not an offer for immediate purchase, but the firm making it asks for a six weeks' option. The best offer for immediate purchase is 87 1/2—that is to say, for every $100 of debenture the firm of Amulius Jarvis & Co. offers to give the city $87.50."

Not for many years has the city received such disappointing offers. Hamilton's credit has been so good that the city has been able to float its debentures at nearly nine per cent. The price obtained last year was 89.40. However, it is some consolation to know that the disappointing character of the tenders this year is not due to any lowering of the city's credit, but the prevailing stringency in the money market. The world is now suffering from the effects of a general revival of enterprise. So much money has been locked up in new investments that it has become scarce and therefore dear.

Today the finance committee has faced the problem bravely, and decided upon action which we think is prudent under the circumstances. It has decided to borrow only $197,000—the amount of the overdraft and the sum required for the sewer works expenditure. Debentures to this amount are to be sold at 91, the loss on this sale being $22,000. The construction of the isolation hospital and east-end fire station must wait, and as much of the work on the annex sewer system as is necessary must be done with money raised by temporary loans.

VILLAGE DESTROYED BY FIRE

St. Thomas, Ont., June 25.—The village of Springfield, 16 miles from here was almost wiped out by fire this morning. On one side of the main street buildings were entirely destroyed. Chambers departmental store, Perry's variety shop, Lamb's general store, Postmaster Chandler's residence, store and barn are a total loss. The loss will total $280,000. One man was injured by falling timber. Word was sent to Aylmer and they responded quickly with the needed help.

All persons owing me are requested to call and settle by the 20th of July. D. L. Gormley 42-44 up.

UP-SIDE-DOWN MULEN.

A Tariff Reformer and One of Nature's Noblemen.

By the death of Cyrus Mullen, who lived near Gillette, the state of Wyoming, if not the entire west, has lost its most eccentric character. Mullen was known all throughout Crook County as Up-Side-Down Mullen. He was a sort of hermit and lived in a log hut about twenty-four miles west of Gillette. Comparatively little was known of the man further than that he lived there alone and never talked to people and was always ready to avoid them. It is known that Mullen had in his younger days been an acrobat in a circus. His age was variously estimated at from 50 to 65 years. He had lived in the little Crook county hut five years. It was not often that he was seen, but when he was he attracted attention. He invariably did his walking on his hands.

Crazy? Well, no, not in the full sense of the word. It was known in the vicinity of his home, however, that Mullen was not right on at least two subjects. They were the make-up of the human body and the protective tariff. One in a great while—less than half a dozen times—he had written communications to Wyoming newspapers touching on both subjects. They were printed and made great sport of by the editors to whom they were sent.

"The human body," he once wrote a Kelton paper, "was made wrong end up. Why should the feet be on the ground and the head up, when the head is the heavier end? Gravitation calls for the head to be downward, that the resistance forced on the back bone is thus lessened. Walk on the hands at least half of the time. Any person can do it with a little practice. I do, and I am one of nature's noblemen.—Cyrus Mullen."

Another time Mullen wrote the same paper a communication concerning the tariff. "It is all wrong," he wrote. "Too high, too high, on leather. Shoes cost entirely too much. Walk on your hands, people as I do and as nature decreed you should, and save those expense. Blessed be the man who walks on his hands and thus obeys nature."—Cyrus Mullen.

It was figured out by the wise ones in Crook County that Mullen had learned to walk on his hands when he was an acrobat. That training had not left him and he was able to live up to his "upside down" notion. Mullen driving to Gillette would meet him once in a while. Always he would be standing or walking on his hands.

About every hundreds yards Mullen would come in his feet to the ground. He would flop on his hands again and away he would go.

People could never approach him from the front. If he saw them he would make it haste across the range. Those who did get near him came up from behind and quietly, too, for the old man had sharp ears. While walking on his hands Mullen would wave his feet together and frequently clap them together. It was startling, indeed, to come upon him suddenly.

Once an automobile came through Gillette and it frightened the horses terribly. But it brought no such fright as they used to get from Mullen when he came down the road walking on his hands. Many a runaway was caused in Crook County by the appearance of this strange up-side down man in the road. Mullen seemed to be able to walk on his hands as well as he could on his feet. He had numerous hounds, made so by the peculiar use to which he put them.

The hermit was not a success man. Nobody ever heard him sing a song or crack a joke, to the knowledge of Crook county people, but on numerous occasions when observed from behind while upside down he was noticed to stop by the road and execute a little dance, patting his hands on the grassy trail and keeping time to something, probably a low whistle. Often he would stand for a period of as much as a minute on one hand while he would rearrange his clothes with his other.

Where Mullen came from nobody knew. He appeared at the little cabin, long before deserted by its squatter, one July and took up his residence there. He had some poultry, and he lived on chicken, eggs and the wild game he could trap. So report it was he was walking upside down that it was commonly told around Gillette that he had once run a railroad. This was denied in part by some of the Crook County people. They declared he did run a railroad, but not until he had wounded it with a stone.

Mullen was found dead on December 2 by a party of young people who visited his cabin determined to corner the old hermit in his den and find out something about him. The young people had gathered at the Bradford ranch for an evening of dancing. About ten o'clock one of the girls asked about Mullen. The discussion of the old man had finally to a waver. It was that the party give up dancing for the remainder of the night, board a hayrack and drive over to the cabin and interview him, by far, if necessary. Two feet footed mules were hitched to the wagon and the party struck out across the range on the run. The fifteen miles to the cottage was covered in about an hour.

With the boys along the party approached the little log house. A knock at the door failed to bring a response, and after repeated trials to arouse the inmate of the cabin the doors kicked in. The room appeared to be empty, so far as Mullen was concerned, for a moment after a match had been struck. However, when the little tallow candle on the table was lighted Mullen was found.

He was standing on his hands in the corner, dead and stiff. He had died of heart failure.

Near the old man's head was a scrawled note. It follows:

"To the finder: 'I, Cyrus Mullen, know I am about to die. My heart is failing. I have no relatives, my mother and father being killed in the wreck of a circus train. I have stifened my arms and shall die on my hands to death. I need no coffin. Dig a big hole with a posthole digger and bury me hands down. Good-bye, world. C.M.'"

Mullen was not buried as he wished. He was interred in a coffin bought by the county, and he now sleeps 200 yards from his little cabin in a horizontal position—not standing on his hands. On a rough board at his head are the words, now badly faded:

"UP-SIDE-DOWN MULEN."
